WHERE THE GRAVENSTEIN GROWS

THE GOLD RIDGE FRUIT BELT, a comparatively small area of exceptionally rich and fertile land, is located in Sonoma County, approximately fifty miles north of San Francisco. The marketing center of the district is Sebastopol, a thriving city of 3000 population.

The Gold Ridge Fruit Belt is some seven miles in width by about fourteen miles in length. Its eastern boundary is a marshy stream known as the Laguna, twelve miles in length and flowing northward, where it empties into Mark West Creek near the junction of that stream with the Russian River. Its western boundary is the crests of the low-lying hills of the Coast Range. Beyond this range the land dips abruptly to the Pacific Ocean. Two miles west of the Laguna and flowing in a similar direction, almost at a parallel, is Green Valley Creek. The low ridge of sandy loam between the two streams together with the foothill land west of Green Valley Creek constitute the Gold Ridge Fruit Belt.

Sebastopol and Other Towns

Sebastopol is the largest population center in the Gold Ridge Fruit Belt. It is an incorporated city with a population of about 3000. It is the hub of the electrical system which serves the entire district and the western terminus of the Northwestern Pacific branch line from Santa Rosa.

There are two solid banks in Sebastopol with deposits of over one million dollars, a live newspaper, a mammoth cannery, a winery operated by the famous Italian-Swiss Colony, a large pre-cooling berry shipping plant, six fruit packing establishments, two machine shops and other industries.

Located in the city is the Analy Township Union High School which takes care of the pupils from fourteen school districts. The high school building erected a few years ago cost $30,000. The Sebastopol grade school building cost $25,000 and nine teachers are employed.

The city has municipally owned adequate and up-to-date water and sewer systems, five miles of cement walks and excellently kept asphaltum streets.

Other towns in the district are Graton, three miles north of Sebastopol, in the heart of the fertile Green Valley; Forestville, seven miles northwest, at the extreme north end of the Gold Ridge Fruit Belt; Vine Hill, Pleasant Hill, Spring Hill, Hessel and Stony Point.

Not the least of the attractions of the Sebastopol section are the opportunities for spending here many enjoyable days in the pursuit of outdoor pleasures. Nature has been extremely lavish in bestowing upon the surrounding country a wealth of wonderful scenic beauty. The Russian River, which flows through the country, directly north of the Sebastopol section, is a favorite rendezvous and camping ground for vacationists from all over the state. Magnificent redwoods shelter the river's banks. Swimming, boating, fishing and hunting are at their best. Thousands of visitors come to this section each summer lured by the beauty of the country. Within the county and not far distant from Sebastopol are points of historic interest, Mission Sonoma, General Vallejo's fort and remnants of the early Russian settlement of this section of California. The Geysers, the Petrified

Forest, mineral springs of various sorts, and the mighty Pacific Ocean offer endless diversion for those who seek outside pleasure.

Why Burbank Selected Sebastopol

Luther Burbank, the great plant wizard, had the whole world from which to choose when he sought a place for carrying on his experiments in the hybridization, propagation and development of the new fruits, flowers and vegetables. Almost twenty-five years ago he selected and purchased a twenty-acre tract of land on a gentle slope near Sebastopol and it is here that he has successfully originated the many specimens of plant life that have brought him fame. On his farm may be seen a remarkable range of vegetation, fruits, flowers and vegetables from every clime, tropic and temperate. No greater testimonial to the diversity and fertility of the Gold Ridge district could be produced.

The soil on Mr. Burbank's experimental farm is the same sandy loam that is found throughout the Sebastopol section. The climatic conditions are exactly the same as apply to the entire district.

The great plant wizard chose Sebastopol for his open-air laboratory because of the richness of the soil and the equableness of the climate. Irrigation is unnecessary, because the rainfall is ample. All conditions for the development and growth of plant life are present, amplified over those of other less favored sections.

the production of the Gravenstein apple. Luther Burbank, an undisputed authority, says: "The Gravenstein apple has, above all others, proved to be the money winner in Sonoma County. It is a healthy, vigorous tree. It always bears a good crop, never overbearing as many varieties do, is of the best quality of all known apples taking into account all uses to which the apple is put. It is the best drying apple for quality and appearance when dried. It is handsome in appearance, good size, superior quality for dessert or cooking, and especially for market.

"It cannot be raised successfully in the hot valleys or Southern California. Sonoma County seems to be its home."

The California State Horticultural Commission in its report on "Apple Growing in California," says of the Gravenstein apple: "This very popular variety has been grown extensively only in the Sebastopol section of Sonoma County, and has there reached its greatest perfection. The Gravenstein is a favorite for general use during its season. When well colored it is golden yellow, beautifully streaked with red.

"The great success that has come to the apple growers of Sonoma County in growing this variety has made it standard for that section, and has illustrated the value of specializing in the apple business."

Besides the Gravenstein many other varieties of apples are grown in the district, principally for fillers and for purposes of cross-pollination. Among the other varieties commonly grown are the Alexander, Spitzenburg, Baldwin, Bellefleur, Jonathan, Hoover, Newtown Pippin, Rhode Island Greening, Wagner and Rome Beauty. The Spitzenburg leads in general favor after the Gravenstein.

The Gravenstein is the earliest market apple, ripening about the first week in July. The earliest shipment on record was made at Sebastopol on July 1st. The crop is generally all shipped out by the end of August. Because of its early harvest the Gravenstein comes into the market without competition, and hence encounters a practically limitless demand.

A careful computation gives the following estimate on the cost of a ten-acre apple orchard: Ten acres of good land at $225 per acre, $2250; preparation of ground at $5 per acre, $50; cost of trees at fifteen cents each, seventy-five trees to the acre, $112.50; cost of planting at $5 per acre, $50; care of orchard for eight years, or until trees are in bearing, at $15 per acre, $1200; total cost of ten-acre bearing orchard, $3662.50, or $366 per acre. This estimate is an average and not the minimum.

During the period between the planting and harvesting of the initial crop the grower may obtain excellent returns from berries planted between the tree rows, a custom which has been generally followed in the Sebastopol district.

An idea of the extent of the industry may be gained by a study of the shipments. During the year 1914 the records show that 250 cars of Gravensteins were shipped fresh. Approximately 300 cars of all other varieties were also shipped as fresh fruit. The Gravensteins went largely into the Eastern markets, while the later apples were sold locally.

Besides the fresh fruit shipments, between 10,000 to 12,000 tons of apples or 1500 to 1800 tons dried product, were dried, and 500 tons were sent to the canneries and vinegar factories.

There is practically no loss from the apple crop, every particle of the fruit now being used. One grower realized $300 last year from the sale of peelings and cores to a vinegar factory, the refuse from his drying house.

The average yield per acre in a good bearing orchard varies from 300 to 1000 boxes. One grower whose trees are from twelve to twenty-five years old, gives eight as the average number of packed boxes to the tree; to the heaviest yielding trees, twenty-five boxes. Seventy-five per cent. of his crop is packed and marketed green, while twenty-five per cent. is sold as dried fruit. He obtains an average of six cents per pound for his dried fruit and an average of seventy-five cents per box for his packed fruit. Another grower with a twenty-year-old orchard, averages seven packed boxes general run to the tree, with an average of fourteen boxes to the heaviest yielding trees in his orchard. Seventy-five per cent. of his crop goes on the market as fresh fruit and twenty-two per cent. is dried, the remaining three per cent. being sold as vinegar apples. This grower obtains an average of six cents per pound for his dried fruit and seventy-five cents per box for his fresh fruit. His orchard is at an elevation of 600 feet.
